

the BICE study

This study examined the association between bicyclists' injuries and the cycling environment (e.g., route types, intersection types). The study took place in Toronto and Vancouver between May 2008 and November 2009. The participants were adults injured while bicycling and treated at hospital emergency departments. For more details see <http://cyclingincities.spph.ubc.ca/injuries/the-bice-study/>

